Property is owned and administered by individuals who are also responsible for and retain power over their own welfare.	Government controls nearly all economic activity while ostensibly leaving the ownership of property in the hands of the people.	Government provides many services such as health care, education, and welfare by forcibly taking money from citizens to redistribute it to others. In addition, this economic type utilizes government control and regulation in varying degrees to achieve goals of the elite ruling class.
Economies that have parts of two or more types of other economies mixed in.	A state of no government.	A limited monarchy, constrained by a constitution and ruled with the help of an elected legislature.
Majority rules with no protection for the minority.	Absolute rule by a small group, either with an individual or political party in charge. Power is held by force.	A limited government, deriving its power from the people, with a constitution of law restraining the government from taking the liberty of the people.
Ostensibly all property and goods are owned in common and shared equally, but in reality the wealth is held by a few elite and taken from the rest of the people by force. All means of production are owned by the government.

Cut cards apart and lay face down, except the cards in ALL CAPS. Match the definitions with the names of economic and government types. Then place each government and economic type under its major heading. The key is above in this unit (4-1).	FREE MARKET	CONTROLLED ECONOMY
